Poetry.

The Young Widow.

"She is modest, but not bashful,
Free and easy, but not bold;
Like an apple, ripe and mellow,
Not too young, and not too old;
Half inviting, half repulsive,
Now advancing and now shy—
There is mischief in her dimple,
There is danger in her eye.

"She has studied human nature,
She is schooled in all her arts,
She has taken her diploma
As the mistress of all hearts;
She can tell the very moment
When to sigh and when to smile;
O, a maid is sometimes charming,
But a widow all the while!

"Are you sad? how very serious
Will her handsome face become!
Are you angry? she is wretched,
Lonely, friendless, tearful, dumb
Are you mirthful? how her laughter,
Silver sounding will ring out!
She can lure, and catch and play you,
As the angler does the trout.

"Ye old bachelors of forty,
Who have grown so bald and wise,
Young Americans of twenty,
With the love-locks in your eyes,
You may practice all the lessons
Taught by Cupid since the fall;
But I know a little widow
Who could win and fool you all."

Miscellaneous.

Green Mantle.

A TALE OF OLD MANCHESTER.

There were a good many of us at home; no lack of mouths to feed, and not much to put in them; so when I had finished my school days—an event which occurred tolerably early—I was packed off to Manchester to serve an apprenticeship in a Manchester warehouse.

I had plenty of work there, and some little pay, and when my father had found the cheap lodgings in the house of an elderly couple, and arranged the payment with them so as to leave me a small sum of pocket-money, he bade me be a good lad and attentive to business, and left me to my fate.

My home was too far distant to admit of my visiting it oftener than once a year, when I obtained a brief holiday for the purpose, and I was terribly lonely in the busy populous town. I knew nobody and was shy of making acquaintances; my companions in the warehouse were off-hand, rattling fellows, little suited to my taste; so I subsided into my quiet lodgings, read, or rather devoured, all the books I could lay my hands on, and grew up a solitary in the midst of thousands.

One passion I had, and that was to hunt up every relic of antiquity I could possibly travel to; and there was not an old church within a circuit of twelve miles that I had not made a pilgrimage to.

The vestiges of old Manchester claimed particular attention, and I haunted the neighborhood, of the "college" and the "old church," (I was too shy to think of asking to enter any of them) until I knew every chink and cranny in their weatherbeaten faces, and came to look upon them as my most intimate friends.—Some of them were public-houses, and I ventured timidly, and at intervals, into these, calling modestly for a glass of ale, and peering into the odd nooks and corners, ducking under the heavy beams, and trying often vainly to look through the old green glass which obscured the long low windows.

Long before my apprenticeship had concluded, I found myself permanently installed in the office, or counting-room as it was more grandiloquently called, and that, no doubt, was the fittest place for me; as years passed on, I became, by translation from stool to stool, packing clerk, invoice clerk, and book-keeper, obtaining an advance of wages with each change of position, until as book-keeper I was munificently paid at the rate of one hundred and fifty pounds a year, and had reached the summit of my ambition.

During my brief visits to the old college, I picked up a sort of acquaintance with one of its constant frequenters, the mustiest old book-worm in the lot, whom I found there when I went in and left there when I came out, and should have believed to live there but that I knew no candles were admitted, and that at night the books would be useless to him without them. He was a strange figure, dressed in a suit of rusty black, with a neckerchief twisted round his throat in a sort of a wisp, a pair of green goggle spectacles upon his nose, and with two, three or four folios usually ranged round him, one for reading, the others for comparison or reference.

I had the good fortune once to hand him a ponderous tome which had slipped from his knees whilst he was intent upon another placed upon the stand before him; and after that time, if by chance he glanced, which might happen once in a month perhaps, whilst I was in the reading room, I was sure of a kindly nod at least before he looked down again.

Once, in a difficulty, I ventured to refer to him, and I was no little astonished by the flood of erudition poured in consequence upon me. He knew everything that had been written upon the subject, and gave me the key to my puzzle immediately, together with a half hundred references wherewith still further to elucidate it. Afterwards our relationship became almost that of master and pupil; and I may say that we became in some sort friends, though our only place of meeting was the library.

The rule in our office was that every one employed should be there and at work at nine o'clock in the morning; and accordingly twenty minutes before nine, precisely, I passed the church tower on my way to it.

I believe that every clock in the back street of Strangeways in which I lived was timed by the church clock as I passed.—From long habit this comparison had become a necessity, and the only temptation I ever had to omit it was occasioned by the passing the same spot, at my precise moment, of a young lady dressed in a green mantle, whom I met morning after morning, whose fresh, pleasant face I got to look for until I fancied that missing it would almost cast a gloom upon the day. It was long before I did miss it; month after month, through the long winter, wet or dry, hail, rain or snow, at twenty minutes to nine I met Greenmantle, as I called her in my own thoughts, opposite the old church tower. Very soon I knew her as well as any old house in the city, or out of it, and could describe every fold in her dress, and every feature in her sweet face, but I had no one to describe them to at that time, and I am not going to begin now.

I was a young man of five-and-twenty then, but as shamefaced as a girl; if I fancied that Greenmantle looked in my direction, I colored to the top of my head, I believe, and hastened onward; if she passed without appearing to notice me, I was miserable for the day.

Gradually I put together a little history for her, but as it was incorrect except in two of its more significant particulars, it need not be detailed here. She had usually a roll of music with her, so I knew she was a governess somewhere, and that was all I could make out with certainty. I wanted to know all about her, who she was, where she lived, what relatives she had, and above all, I wanted to know her. I had got to love her before I had exchanged a word, or even a nod with her. Her face was the index to all goodness, and I felt that I must win her or die. If I was shy as a girl, I was every bit as romantic, and I actually upset all the neighbors' equanimity by starting from my lodgings ten munites before my accustomed time, and so persuading them that every clock in the street was ten minutes behind time. But I missed seeing Greenmantle. I ran back, indeed, just in time to see her skirt disappear in the distant crowd; but that did not content me, for weeks I became a true timekeeper again. Then I tried being late; I left my lodgings at the accustomed hour indeed; but I loitered upon the road, and Greenmantle passed me at almost my own street end. I lingered and watched, but she went on until I could distinguish her no longer. Then I turned and ran—ran at the top of my speed to the office, which I reached five minutes after nine, in time to find every one, from the master downward speculating upon my being seriously unwell, or possibly defunct. Thus things went on till midsummer; I met Greenmantle without appearing to recognize her, every morning, and I spent hours every evening in visiting places in which I thought it possible to meet her; but, except at the precise spot, at twenty minutes before nine, I never had the luck to find her.

I began to speculate upon the possibility of obtaining a day's holiday, in order to discover where she went to, and possibly even, where she lived. I dwelt upon the idea delighted, but the obstacles appeared insuperable. Could I say I had urgent private business? Of course. But of what nature? I could not summon courage to tell a lie, and perhaps still less could I have told the truth.

One morning Greenmantle did not appear.

It was midsummer, and we were busy with our annual balance-sheet; it was all but complete, and I had signed it; instead of Richard Naylor, I signed, "Greenmantle." I toro off the corner surreptitiously, spilled some ink upon the mutilated remnant, and toiled far into the night to produce a clean copy, which I had very nearly signed "Greenmantle," again.

For the next week or two I was miserable; that Greenmantle must be enjoying her holiday I knew well enough; but it was no slight deprivation to find myself alone, morning after morning, at the accustomed hour.

I determined I know not why; I would speak to her; I composed numberless pretty speeches; one or two fresh ones every day; I committed them resolutely to memory; I conned them over as I walked, in the office even; and I make mistakes in the books; my ledger, which no penknife had ever touched, was disgraced forever; and still Greenmantle came out.

It was the middle of August, and I ought to have started upon my annual journey home.

I stirred not, and made no sign.

At length I was ordered off. I was getting thin and ill, and my master saw it, and told me to go into the country for ten days.

I obeyed I commenced a systematic search for Greenmantle. I questioned everybody, cabmen, policemen, porters; many had seen her but not lately, and none knew where she lived. I was pursuing my search still, and a week of my leave had nearly expired, when coming suddenly into the market place I saw Greenmantle; I was sure it was she, but some carts intervened, and before I could reach the spot she was gone.

Here was new life, new hope for me! I spent long hours in the market next day, with Bowen's spectacles always looking at me and seeming to ask what I did there; but I was rewarded at last, I saw Greenmantle coming, and pushed toward her through the crowd. I reached her, and should have spoken; it was her mantle, but the bonnet was different, so was the face!

Here was disappointment doubly deep! I was reckless, my timidity had flown, and I spoke to the girl who wore the mantle I had been seeking so long. She was Greenmantle's sister. Greenmantle was ill; had been very ill; but she was better. Oh! yes she was getting strong again; they did not live far from there. I was mad, I believe, and I fancy the girl thought so. I bought grapes, oranges, apples, flowers, and I wanted to buy wine for her. I poured my purchases into the skirt of the greenmantle, and insisted upon seeing it home. I sent messages of love, and sorrow, happiness; I was grieved for this, miserable for the other; I was eloquent and beside myself. I talked more in the ten minutes which it took us to go through the market and to the top of Smithy-door than I had done for months before; and when I was dismissed at the door, I stood gazing absently at the old picturesque building which held nearly all I cared for, until I turned sick and faint, from excess of joy.

I went there in the evening, and knocked timidly (after many efforts) at the door.

The woman of the house told me greenmantle's name. "Yes, Miss Walton and her sister lived there; Miss Walton had been ill; but she was mending nicely; she would give my card, would say that I had called; would I wait then?" I felt very nervous, but I would wait and in a few moments the sister came to me; Greenmantle had recognized me; Greenmantle would see me; would I walk up stairs?

It was an old-fashioned house, and I had never before seen one so charming; the stairs were of old oak, wide and spacious; I sprang up them with alacrity, three flights were passed, and then in a large wainscoted, poorly furnished room, I found Greenmantle, pale and propped with pillows, but with a pleasant smile of welcome on her worn, dear face, I could do no more than I had done, she said they were well off, they were rich; at least they had sufficient to last them for sometime; but she was glad to see me, it was like seeing an old friend. Then Greenmantle spoke of books, pictures, flowers; led me to my own subjects, and appeared to listen with interest. I was eloquent; I was inspired; I astonished myself in particular; but I had no time to think of it then. Her sister told me to go; Greenmantle was tired, but I might come again; the next day if I chose. I did choose, and I chose to go for many days after.

I haunted the neighborhood of their lodgings; and I have a particular affection yet for the large window near the top of the most picturesque old house in Mancheste, that at the higher end of old Smithy door. From that window Greenmantle has often looked kindly down at me.

She recovered rapidly; her sister said that I was the best doctor; and after I had spoken my love which I did soon, and without any extraordinary bungling in doing so, she told me her plain simple story. Their father was a tradesman in a distant town; they had been carefully educated, partly with the idea that they might have to fight their own way; father and mother both died very suddenly, almost at the same hour, and there was nothing left for them but their piano and some trifling articles of furniture which their father's creditors had presented to them. They had an uncle in Manchester (he was in the next room, and I must get his consent;) so they had come here, and Greenmantle had maintained her sister and herself by her exertions as a governess. She had continued her sister's education too, and she hoped now that she could supply her place.

And so Greenmantle went with a radiant face, to call her uncle; and I waited in fear and trembling, his much-dreaded approach.—First I heard a clatter of falling books, then a merry laugh and a shuffling of slippered feet, and then the door opened and Greenmantle entered leading by the hand—my old friend of the college library!

I sprang to him; I think I should have liked to kiss him, for he shook me warmly by both hands, muttered something about being happy—good boy, good girl, very good girl; and shuffled away to his books again.

And then Greenmantle made her confession. She had known me quite as long as I had known her; indeed she thought longer, for several times she had passed me whilst I was looking at my watch; she saw that I was punctual; she saw that I was fond of pictures; she knew kaew that I liked flowers; she had known my name long since; she knew that her uncle had met me; and crowning confession of all—but that was not made till after we were married—she produced my portrait, which she had painted for herself in secret, after, as she said, she knew that I loved her, and hoped that I would some day tell her so.

So Greenmantle's sister began to pass the old church, at twenty minutes to nine every morning, and for a little I used to meet and to bid "good morning" there; but as soon as I had got my cage ready I took home my bird; and now we have turned Greenmantle into a ring-dove, leaving the owl and linnet to keep house together, till the linnet settles in her own nest, (which, judging from appearances, will not be long first,) and then the owl is to come to us, and I am to rummage both his books and his brains at my pleasure.

WHISTLING GIRLS.—Show me a girl who has the hardihood to whistle in these days when every thing natural, even to the very hair on your head, is at a discount, and I'll show you a girl you can depend upon, one who will not fail you in time of need, who will give the true hearty grasp, the cordial hand shake, the warm genuine welcome, no tip of the kid glove and cold, "how do you do," who can brave danger, look toil in the face without shrinking, "laugh with those that laugh, and weep with those that weep," as well as whistling with those that whistle; who can, in short, take the world as she finds it, rough and rugged, and not go through life as though she were walking on eggs and afraid of cracking a shell; who deals in substance, not shadow.

*Judge Warmouth presents himself as a Territorial delegate from Louisiana.

Except in the case of Tennessee it is impossible to classify the politics of the members elect from the seceded States. Messrs. Chandler and Barbour of Virginia, claim to be Union men, and Mr. Leftwich of Tennessee, is stated to be of the same faith by some of the newspapers of his State. The Tennessee Senators are probably Unionists, as also those from Virginia.

Let us go to Meeting.

So I say. So I trust you will say, every Sunday morning and afternoon.—What every Sunday? Yes, every Sunday, rain or shine. There is nothing like being on hand.

The habit of being always in church on these two occasions is of itself a good habit. It is a real discipline. It is the best of schools. The man who is prompt that much in things of God, is likely to be prompt in other things. He who does not mind the storm on such occasions will not be likely to on other occasions. He will be a man.

It does the minister good. What if it is cloudy, or cold, or hot, he has, if a faithful man (and surely you would have no other,) spent the best hours of the week in preparing his sermon. Shall he prepare a feast and have none to partake of it? We knew a man who preached his best sermons on these days. It was a loss to the absent ones.

What more beautiful sight than a family on their way to church, at church, and returning from church. What more pleasant for the boy, the girl, the son, the daughter, the father, the mother. It does them good. It will you.

But I have not got clothes. Get them. Have Sunday clothes. Preserve them neat and clean. Have working clothes besides. You will feel better for it.—You will do more work in the week for it. Men will be more likely to give you work, better work and more of it, with better pay. But suppose you cannot get the best of clothing, take such as you can get. Keep it well. Folks will respect you more for being in the house of God than out of it. They will look at you, not your clothes.

Above all, God will be pleased. Surely it is good to please Him. His word teaches that those families who go to meeting Sundays will be blessed of Him. The history of our country teaches the same. The farms of a town show whether the people are church-goers. Go into a town where people do not go to worship and you see it in all that pertains to society. Like their farms, they are uncultivated, coarse, vulgar. They lack industry and thrift.

Boys, we insist upon it, go to meeting every Sabbath. Girls, get up early Sunday morning that you and they may go to church. Help father, help mother, get boots, get shoes, horse and carriage, and sleig

Prospectus of the Ellsworth American for 1866.

The Ellsworth American has been printed now, almost or quite eleven years. It was never in a more prosperous condition than at this time, which is not saying a great deal, for the record of newspaper failures in the County since the establishment of the Castine Journal in 1799, is a sad one. No less than some fifteen to twenty publications of the kind have been started, and have each in turn failed, no one living longer than about six years.

The Twelfth Volume of the American commences in January, 1866; and we wish to commence the volume with an increased number of subscribers, thereby enabling the publisher to make sundry improvements. To do this we must rely on the aid of its many friends, in the several towns in the County. We ask, therefore, those friends who have taken the paper from the beginning, and those who have heretofore aided us by their patronage and good will, to continue the same good offices; and not only continue subscribers, but to ask others to become so.

We have no great promises to parade before you. As in the past, so in the future, the American will continue an earnest supporter of the cause of civil and religious liberty, and an earnest and enthusiastic advocate of Union principles.

The American will aim to do its part in developing a spirit of enterprise in the County, encouraging all efforts to put into operation new enterprises tending to build up the community in which the journal circulates, and also to create and foster a disposition to stay at home in Maine, because we believe it one of the best States in the Union.

While this journal has never ceased to have opinions and to express them on all the current topics of the day, it has also aimed to be fair, and has been liberal in according to those with whom it has disagreed, an opportunity to be heard when sought for.

In the future we shall always expect to have opinions on the debatable topics of the day, and shall not fail to express them, nor shall we fail to hear other sides. We don't sell our opinions in selling the paper to subscribers, not at all, and we premise any one is, that He or they shall be heard.

We shall do what we can also to make the American a household necessity in the County, so that those who can, will take it, and those who fail of the means, will desire to do so.

We shall do what we can to give a faithful record of local current events, keeping our readers fully posted up in matters and things at home.—Not to know what is transpiring at home, argues a thoughtlessness and indifference not at all commendable.

The American will aim to be a news paper, so far as it is possible to make it so by the unremitting attention of the Editor and also by the assistance of correspondents in different sections of the country.

We have secured an able Washington correspondent, who will give us a weekly digest of Metropolitan news. We expect to have an Augusta correspondent during the session of the Legislature, who will keep our readers advised of matters and things at the State Capital.

After this issue we shall use smaller sized type on the paper, thereby enabling us to give near one third more reading matter than now. We do this because we have failed in obtaining our new press in season to commence the new volume in an enlarged form.

We ask the friends of the American to assist in extending its circulation; and also particularly desire that the Postmasters of the County will render us what assistance they can in this direction.

TERMS:—Two dollars per year.

Reasonable compensation allowed for obtaining subscribers. Any person sending us five good subscribers for one year, shall have a copy gratis.

Christmas.

This world-wide holiday has come and gone again for 1865. The natal-day of the Saviour, very wisely and appropriately is devoted to festivity. Christmas is a glowing, hopeful, inspiring festal day. Little folks, with no exceptions, believe in Santa Claus, and therefore hang up the waiting empty stocking in the chimney corner over night, and retire early, to dream of the Jolly-God's inexhaustless stores of pretty things, and of their share of his wares.

Don t we pray you disbelieving mother, or father, neither the elder brother or sister of the household, labor to dispel the cheerful belief of the little ones in Santa Claus. Let him be to them a reality, so that their happy days shall be made still happier by their confiding faith. What though these sweet ones, in fancy, see Santa Claus coming down chimney loaded with presents. He might as well come down chimney as in at the door; and to the little ones be indeed, a verity, as only a fancy picture. Help, all of you, who are so placed as that you can help in the good work, to keep up this festive day; Pile up bountiously, the christmas tree; crowd to the brim the inviting stocking; see that all the little ones are visited by Santa Claus. But we are a day too late, for we write on the 26th, and the day of presents, of hilarity, of good cheer, for 1865, is numbered with the past; but we can, say a good word for all those that acted rationally, naturally, and sympathetically yesterday. And yet the "Twelve Merry Days of Christmas" are not ended. The province of Santa Claus is to inaugurate the festival, and to set a good example. This has been done, and now each and every member of the household may follow the example.

"The motley mummers no longer make merry among their friends and neighbors, and the children no longer go from door to door, singing their Christmas carols; dining halls are no longer green with holly and ivy; and few are the fair maidens that are kissed in this country under the mistletoe bough. And yet Christmas still comes welcome as of old—the day above all others consecrated to the high hopes and noble affections and sweet charities of life. The preacher is still heard from the pulpit, and with more attentive ear, for fuller and clearer are the "good tidings of great joy" he now proclaims to the sons of men. The Chaistmas table is yet loaded with substantial cheer that maketh the heart glad; and plum pudding, goose, turkey, minced pies, and roast beef, have more than made good all the boars' heads that forest ever teemed with. Santa Claus yet makes his annual rounds, and stockings are fuller, and Christmas trees brighter, and merry voices merrier, and rosy cheeks rosier than before. The games and the sports are not all done with yet, and millions of homesteads will on Monday echo, like spring groves, with the joy of birds. It will be the hey-day of youth and innocence, and the oldest hearts, if they be not the searest and the hardest, it will make fresh and young again. There may be, nay indeed, we know that there are those spirits that have been soiled with dust and cankered with the mildew of the world,—but who of our readers shall be intolerant, or careless, or ashamed of the household loves that shall this day be uttered in words and embodied in actions!"

The New Year.

We shall anticipate a little and bid our readers a Happy New Year this week. On Monday we shall commence the year 1866, and shall have cast off that of 1865, or that will have cast us off, in its flight to the great Past. With us, how many changes has the past twelve months wrought. One year ago we were engaged in putting down the rebellion, looking anxiously and inquiringly into the future, if that were possible, to see, when the end of strife would come. Many an household watched with intense interest for the first tidings of the far off battle, and with closed lips and palpitating hearts read the list of killed and wounded in the last battle or skirmish to see if some loved absent one was among the unfortunate dead. Not so now. All this is past. Peace with its attendant blessings is smiling upon the land. We have asserted the majesty of the constitution, of the laws of the land, and of the right of the Union to still live undimmed, unshorn of its strength, and of its dimensions. Therefore we commence the New Year under the most glorious circumstances. It is our duty now, to go to the work before us, to the new duties which changed circumstances have brought to our notice, with thankful hearts and with a determined will to act our part well under the banner of Peace as we did in the war which we have just emerged from.

We wish all our readers, a Happy New Year.

SAD ACCIDENT.—A sad affair happened near Cranberry Isles, on Sunday the 24th inst., by the upsetting of a boat and the drowning of two persons, Capt. Enoch S. Gilley of Cranberry Isle, and Miss Augusta Stevens of Bucksport. They were soon to be married. Edward S. Fernald and George, his brother, were in the boat at the time, and came very near being drowned also. They were so far lifeless that they were supposed to be past recovery; but by the application of proper remedies were restored to life. Capt. Gilley sank, and his body was recovered on Monday. The body of Miss Stevens floated, her clothes keeping the body upon the water. George Fernald swam part way to the shore before giving up. His brother held to the mast of the boat which floated near him. Mr. Stillman G. Young went to the rescue, and secured the two Fernalds and Miss Stevens. But for his timely efforts all four would have perished.

——John M. Botts is in Washington. He don't want any man who had anything to do with the rebellion admitted as a member of Congress. This allows no chance for repentance.

The Monthly Report of the Agricultural Department for November.

We have received from the Commissioner the November Report of the Department of Agriculture. Like all the preceding papers from this source, it is a highly interesting document.

The entire production of cereals and potatoes, says the report, is as follows:—For 1865, 1,228,501,232 bushels; 1864, 1,013,429,871 bushels; 1863, 953,288,632 bushels, making an increase in 1865, over 1864 of 215,061,111 bushels; and over 1863, of 275,212,650 bushels. Maine's share in the production of 1865, is put down as follows; corn, 1,692,020 bushels; tobacco, 7,280 lbs.; buckwheat, 356,684 bushels; potatoes, 5,391,864 bushels. We do not find in this statement an account of the estimated number of bushels of wheat, rye, oats, peas, &c., in Maine for 1865.—The increase of the corn crop of 1865 over that of 1864, is 172,846,450, in quantity. Its quality is universally excellent.

The Commissioner is no friend of the jug-handle Canadian Reciprocity Treaty. He publishes a table published by the Montreal Transcript, compiled by an English statistician to prove the value of said Treaty, and refutes its arguments. This statement," says Mr. Commissioner Newton, "is important to the American farmer for it exhibits an intention to press upon this country a renewal of the reciprocity treaty, and is a presentation of an argument for this renewal."

"The present condition of Canada is represented, by all accounts we have seen, as the reverse of prosperity. Its trade has been mainly with the U. S., for this country is the outlet of its chief industrial products—those of agriculture. The prospect of the stopping of this outlet produces an alarm, resulting in this adversity. In 1863 the total exports of Canada were $37,059,989, of which $15,175,817 were sent to Great Britain, and $20,050,432 to the U. States. For the first six months of 1864, (our reports are not to a nearer date,) the total exports were $11,979,105, of which $3,800,573 were to Great Britain, and 7,722,507 to the U. S. The reciprocity of good will on the part of Canada to this country in the hour of its greatest trial has somewhat conflicted with this reciprocity of trade, but to what extent it may have lessened it we have no present means of determining.

For the farmer, we answer thus:

"You, Mr. Canada, placed your workshops in Great Britain, and now you find that Russian and Prussian wheat is consumed in preference to your own. Having no home market of your own, and that of Great Britain being as unstable to you as it is to us, you cannot now find a market here, in conflict to us; you must place yourselves in a position of complete equality with us. The States of this Union have no right to lay duties on imports; a treaty of reciprocity must place you in like condition. The farmers of all the States cannot receive any imported goods without first paying duties, for the purpose of sustaining our government. A treaty of reciprocity must place your farmers in like condition, else there will be no reciprocity in the operation of a treaty of reciprocity. The duties raise the home prices of our own manufactures; you must consume these, as thus enhanced in price else your condition and our own will be what it has been in past years—you selling in our market your products but not buying ours in return. The farmer who lives in the west demands unimpeded and unrestricted channels of transportation to the sea-board; a treaty of reciprocity must place your territory in like condition. In a word, the terms of a reciprocity treaty cannot be less in effect as to commercial intercourse than would be a treaty of annexation. As to a treaty of annexation we have nothing to do with, and care less about, a political treaty of that kind. What we have said is to show that no treaty of commerce can be reciprocal which leaves your condition different from that of the farmer of this country."

THE CONGRESSIONAL BILL TO REIMBURSE THE LOYAL STATES. The following is the bill introduced in the United States House of Representatives Monday, by Hon. J. G. Blaine of this State, to reimburse the States that made advances and contracted debts in support of the war:

Section First—There shall be reimbursed to each of the loyal States a sum equal to ——dollars per each man duly enlisted and mustered from said States into the military or naval service of the United States during the late war, which number shall be determined by the records in the office of the Provost Marshal General.

Section Second—The amount to be thus reimbursed shall be in bonds of the United States, bearing six per cent. interest, payable semi-annually in loyal money, and redeemable at the pleasure of the United States after ten years from the date of issue and payable in thirty years.

Section Third—Each State, on the receipt of said bonds, shall apply them, or their proceeds, in good faith, as follows:—First, To the liquidation of whatever state debt may have been contracted in support of the war. Second, In an equitable manner to the reimbursement of counties, cities, towns, townships, and other municipal corporations, for advances made, or debts incurred, in support of the war; and Third, the residue, if there be any, in such manner as the State Legislature may determine.

Section Fourth—It shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Treasury to prepare said bonds, and deliver the same to the treasurer of each State entitled to receive them, on or before the first day of A. D. 1866, and the receipt of said bonds shall be in full liquidation and payment of all claims from said State growing out of the late war.

A special committee was appointed to consider the subject, consisting of the following members:

Messrs. Blaine of Maine; Hooper, of Massachusetts; Loan, of Missouri; Boyer, of Pennsylvania; Darling, of New York; Plants, of Ohio; Morrill, of Vermont.

——A Christmas tree was to be seen at the residence of Charles L. Delaitre, on Monday evening, a fine looking one, loaded down with choice presents, placed there by Santa Claus, of course, making all the eyes of the little ones, sparkle, and their hearts palpitate with joy. In this case all seemed to be or should be classed with the children, for all received presents, and all were delighted. More than three hundred presents from the thoughtful Santa Claus' bounteous store house, were hung upon the branches of the graceful tree. No doubt, there were other similar gatherings in town and some other dwellings were equally blessed on that occasion.

Gen'l Chamberlain's Lecture.

Notwithstanding the severe storm on last Thursday evening, a good audience assembled at Whiting's Hall to listen to the lecture of General Chamberlain, on the Maine 20th. We do but echo the universal sentiment of the large audience assembled, in stating that the lecture was one of surpassing merit. Those in attendance were held in complete subjection for an hour and three quarters, by the power of the speaker. Thinking that something more than a mere mention of this effort is due to the speaker and his noble regiment, we append so much of the report of it as we find in the Portland Transcript. It is not every regiment that was so fortunate in its chosen leader, while marching to do gallant service for the Union in the field, nor in having one so well able to make its deeds historic, by the magic power of the pen:

"The story of a heroic fight was told by Gen. Chamberlain, in his lecture here last week, with classic elegance of style and a vivid power of word painting. It was more than a mere battle-piece; it was a revelation of history, a vindication of brave men who have never yet received full credit for their heroic deeds. The story itself, while designed only to do justice to his regiment, fully bore out the compliment which, on introducing him to the audience, Gov. Washburn paid to the lecturer when he said he had high authority for pronouncing him "the first military genius contributed by New England to the war." The General told his story with the modesty of the true soldier, and the grace and elegance of the scholar. Many of his sentences were finely turned; he was at times even too rhetorical in style, but his descriptions of the battle were exceedingly vivid and picturesque. He gave us an inside view of the fight, took us with him into the thick of the battle, amid the crackle of musketry, the roar of artillery, the cries, the smoke, and flame and blood of the determined hand to hand contest.

His regiment, the 20th Maine, formed part of the brigade sent on that eventful day of July, to hold the rocky eminence called Little Round Top, on the extreme left of the Union lines. It was a position of great importance, and should have been earlier secured. As the brigade went toiling up the rocky ascent the rebels in dark masses were already advancing on the opposite side of the rocky gorge below it. Shot and shell whistled over the heads of our men as they struggled up the steep. The summit was reached and the line of battle was formed. The enemy came on dark and multitudinous as the angry sea. There was the distant murmur swelling to a roar: the surging masses of armed men with flags unfurled, with defiant shouts, dashing towards the hill. Our artillery, lifted up the steep by hand, replied to theirs. The rattle of musketry followed, and the battle raged with fury. The assailants largely outnumbered the assailed, but the latter had a strong position which they must hold or be entirely cut off. They had but one outlet from their position and if the enemy gained their rear that was lost. In the midst of the fight Col. Chamberlain, standing on a rock above his men, saw a body of the enemy, behind their front line, stealthily moving to the extreme left. Their object was apparent—it was to envelope our left and rear. How to meet them was the question. It was done by a most skillful movement. Ordering his right wing to extend its line, by a side step, while still firing at the enemy in front, so as to fill the space occupied by the whole regiment and present no gap to the enemy, the left wing was moved by the rear to the point of threatened attack. When the enemy came in view, instead of an unguarded point as they expected, they found their advance resolutely opposed. Greatly outnumbering our men, however, they rushed to the onset with loud hurrahs. The conflict became determined and deadly; the men met and mingled in the line; at times Col. Chamberlain saw more of the enemy than of his own men around him. Overborne by numbers our brave boys were at last forced to fall back, inch by inch, until their dead and dying lay between them and the enemy. Maddened by the sight, they rushed again upon the foe, and drove them from the field! But fresh regiments advanced from the woods to take the place of the flying foe. Again the terrible conflict raged; again outnumbered our line fell slowly back to the boulders, when rebounding from them, they again dashed at the enemy, and again sent them flying to the cover of the woods. The men were now exhausted; nearly half their number had fallen; the color sergeant, all his comrads dead or dying, stood alone by the flag, his intrepid conduct serving, it almost seemed, to alone fill the gap in the line! But a third time the enemy advanced.—Our men, supplying themselves with guns and ammunition from the dead rebels around them, prepared once more to meet them. Fortunately the enemy stopped half way and commenced firing. The 20th returned their fire until their ammunition was exhausted, and then turned an anxious look at their commander. He uttered but one word, "Bayonets!" With a glad cry the steel was fixed, and without waiting for the word "Charge," the thin line leaped forward with the fury of the tiger. The enemy were struck with amazement; they threw down their arms, held up their hands and begged for their lives! Rushing over these the line went on, and a rebel Colonel, who should have shot him dead, surrendered to Col. Chamberlain his whole command. It was difficult to stop the men—they were on the road to Richmond! With difficulty Col. Chamberlain brought them back. A whole brigade had flung down their arms to one hundred and ninety-eight men! They returned with four hundred prisoners, leaving one hundred and fifty of the enemy dead on the field. Night was falling. The men dropped from exhaustion, and many had fallen asleep. But again they aroused at the word that the flag was going forward, and amid a terrible fire carried the summit of Great Round Top. Next day, when the 20th was called by the commander of the brigade to the head of the column, and handsomely complimented for their heroic conduct, the rebel prisoners they had taken bearing what was going on, gave three cheers for the 20th Maine! Their praise was in the mouths of their enemies. They had lost half their number, but they had saved the day. Their determined bravery had prevented the enemy from turning our left wing, and contributed in no small degree to the success of the conflict.

All honor to the 20th Maine! Their gallantry and valor should ever be remembered with pride by their native State."

MR. EDITOR:—Having noticed in your paper an account of some of the smart women of Hancock County, please mention that Mrs. Ann Mayo of West Eden, now in the 71st year of her age, has woven the past season 328 yards of cloth, having spooled and quilled the yarn for the same. She has also spun 52 skeins of yarn, besides performing her household duties. M. T.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Dec. 20, 1865.

MR. EDITOR:—This little Provincial city presents many attractions and novelties just upon the eve of the Holidays.—Everybody is preparing for Christmas and New Year's. The windows of stores and little shops are filled with elegant articles to tempt the eyes and pockets of men, women and children. Shopmen are busy in suiting the tastes of fastidious customers to costly articles for Christmas presents. Evergreens are being brought in for decorations, and nimble fingers are rapidly twining wreaths and festoons for churches, private dwellings, and any place having a window to display the emblem, if not the genuine holly. People unused to fast walking, now hasten rapidly along the streets. Every face seems to carry the expression, "a gala day is at hand." Young ladies in groups trip by us with hands full of pretty things, and hearts full of joy, judging from the sparkling of their bright eyes.

After the first fall of snow, there is amusement in standing by the Bell Tower, near the head of King's Street, and watching the variety of costumes and vehicles passing of every fashion and pattern—the sled with a Newfoundland dog attached drawing children, and the little pony with a miniature sleigh, trotting out a miniature couple. There comes an elegant team driven by a young lady, the sleigh ornamented with rich furs and drawn by a proud horse in showy harness, set off with silver bells on the saddle, rosettes of ribbon, and gay streamers on the bridles.—How lightly she glides over the new snow! 'Tis difficult which to admire most, the equipage, or the driver. The ladies of St. John, display much taste in selections of winter dress. Fur constitutes an important part of their costume. The fur cape, the muff, the boa, the fur satchel (with tiny head and wide open eyes of the little mink attached) fur gauntletts, fur boots, the coquettish fur turban, are all seen today on promenade.

Neither are the gentlemen behind in their out-door suits of fur coats, caps, collars, gloves, and over-shoes of quality and value suiting the ability of the wearer.

If Maine people suppose because St. John is little farther "down east," than themselves, she is necessarily behind the times, we would gently invite them to relinquish that idea. Perhaps she cannot furnish startling material for the police record equal to Portland or Bangor, but she compares favorably with New England cities in all that relates to city improvements.

If a person visiting St. John has any interest in physical culture, he will enjoy passing an evening at the Gymnasium. The building itself is worth some painstaking to see, being one of the best east of New York. The spacious hall accommodating two hundred pupils, provided with every kind of apparatus, is heated by steam and lighted with gas. A fine reading room (inviting as a parlor,) with numerous bath and dressing rooms beautifully fitted up, contribute greatly to the enjoyment of the students. The building was completed about one year since under the immediate supervision of F. A. Jones, Esq., of New York, who deserves great credit in his profession. Uniting the qualifications for a teacher of modern Gymnastics and Calisthenics, to those of the cultivated and polished gentleman, he deservedly receives large patronage.

Maine has many sons resident citizens of this city. Some came here twenty years since, and have found the road to wealth and position. We were glad to hear from them sentiments of loyalty for the dear old stars and stripes, whose supremacy they prayed for during the terrible scourge upon us. Among these men is our esteemed friend Samuel P. Osgood, Esq., formerly of Hancock county, but for the last sixteen years a resident of St. John. We cannot refrain from here recording that much of our happiness during this brief holiday visit, is due to the kindness and generosity of our old friend and his estimable lady. The harmonious interchange of political sentiments is always agreeable, then add overflowing hospitality, with "hearty cheer" and the sum total of delightful social intercourse is found.—With sincere regrets, we bid St. John and our kind friends adieu this evening, and shall long remember the fortunate incident that brought our feet hither.

Safes.

Very much was said last fall in the papers of this State in regard to the protection of Safes for valuable papers. After the great fires at Augusta and Belfast, for awhile, the public were told that these "iron boxes" were cheats, &c., and afforded no protection at all. It was affirmed we think, that only the steel vault safes withstood the fire at Augusta. At the time we had one of the Tilton & McFarland Safes, No. 5, and therefore watched the discussion with some interest. We have seen, this week, letters from various gentlemen in Augusta who were burned out there, and who had safes of the same make. One gentleman, Mr. Potter, says: "I had one of the Tilton & McFarland Safes, double doors, steel chest, combination lock. It was in the third story, having to fall forty feet into the cellar. It was buried in the ruins thirty-six hours. When taken out it was in good condition, very little warped, &c.

Mr. R. W. Black, says: "I had one of your safes, (No. 5) in my office, located in a room in Meonian Building. The safe fell four stories and then was subjected to the heat of the bricks for forty-eight hours. Supposing every thing in it was consumed, I had it removed and opened, and was gratefully surprised to find the contents in a comparatively good condition. Some of the papers being blackened some, but the writing legible.

Mr. Chas. E. Coller, says: "I had one of your safes, single door, in the fire at Augusta, in a wooden building, three stories from the ground, having to fall thirty feet. It was subjected to all the heat possible, for a wooden building, and was in the fire for twenty-four hours. Contents coming out in perfect order, none of the books having to be rebound. We are perfectly satisfied with it and shall order another, &c."

Mr. Chas. W. Safford writes, "The safe I purchased of you was subjected to a great heat in the late fire and acquitted itself well. Every book and paper is as perfect as when deposited in the safe, except a slight discoloration of the files that are in the pigeon holes, and the scatching of a leather pocket-book that was in the iron cash box. Mine was a single safe."

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY for January 1866, is before us. The leading article is entitled, Passages from Hawthorn's Note Books. The other papers are, "Castles in the Air; Beauty and the Beast; The Wilderness; The Bells of Lynn; The High Tide of December; Lucy's Letters; Doctor Johns; Wind the Clock; The Kingdom Coming; The Chimney Corner; Griffith Gaunt; or Jealousy; Reviews and Literary Notices, &c., &c.

——Messrs. Ticknor & Fields, propose to publish on Saturday, January 6, a new weekly journal, entitled "Every Saturday" It is to be a journal of choice reading, selected from current foreign literature.

——Dr. Hamlin wrote an able and valuable letter from Constantinople, to the Christian Mirror, published in that journal a few weeks since, on the cholera.—This letter goes into the subject pretty thoroughly, and embodies the views of one well able to give the soundest advice upon the treatment of this alarming and fatal disease. This letter has been published in a small sized tract, and is for sale at the Mirror office for the small sum of 5 cents.

——We have received a pamphlet called the "Bank Guide," containing a list of the New England and New Jersey Banks which have surrendered their charters, giving all the particulars, compiled by Chas. B. Clapp, Gardiner, Maine. This must be a valuable little work, and should be in the hands of all business men.

——We are under obligations to Senator Morrill for a copy of the November Report of the Agricultural Department.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS for January 1866, is received. The old proverb saith, "that the proof of the pudding is in the eating; we opine, the way the young folks hereabout praise this magazine, that it reads well, pleases well, and satisfies well, all the reading public. Such writers as Mrs. Stowe, Mrs. Child, Capt. Mayne Reid, Bayard Taylor, &c., &c., contribute to its pages. It can't help being good. Single subscriptions $2.00 per year. Tickor & Fields, Boston.

THE LANDING OF THE PILGRIMS.—We have received a copy of the Sermon preached Dec. 17, the Sunday preceding the anniversary of the Landing of the Pilgrims, by Rev. C. C. Everett, Pastor of the Independent Congregational Church, Bangor. This effort of Mr. Everett, like all preceding ones that we have heard or read, does him much honor. "Our Fourth of July," says the author, "is ushered in by the peal of cannon and lighted out by the blaze of fire-works. In these last years, we have studded the calender of the nation, all over with sacred and famous days, days of victory, days on which Liberty arose in new grandeur and a larger universality of power, days which stir fresher and more tender memories in our souls."

This sermon was published by request. B. A. Barr, Bangor, printer.

ITEMS, &c.

——Hon. L. D. Campbell of Ohio, has been appointed Minister to Mexico.

——General Howard has issued a circular to the Assistant Commissioners of his bureau calling attention to the report of General Grant.

——General Grant had a horse presented to him by some gentlemen of New York city, recently.

——Congress adjourned over on Thursday the 21st, to Jan. 5th.

Mrs. McDonalds Theatrical Company are playing in Norenbega Hall, Bangor. This company has some actors of merit. Little Eva, (Mina Crolius) created quite a sensation here.

We learn that this company plays here on Monday evening next, New Year's day eve, and for one evening only, on its way east. On Tuesday it performs in Cherryfield.

——Those Ladies and Gentlemen who attend the dancing school will find a notice of a little manual for the ball room in our advertising columns.

——The Boston Post says a three tongued infant has been born in Scotland. Is it a female?

——We club with Messrs. Ticknor and Fields new paper Every Saturday at $5.50. The subscription price for this new paper is $5.00 per year. We shall publish the prospectus next week.

——We expect the carrier boy of the American will be on hand Monday with his Address, waiting for the quarters. We bespeak for him a kind remembrance; and if he has been in any way remiss in his weekly visits, just tell him so kindly, when handing him your mite.

——Rev. Mr. Savory, Universalian, preached at the Baptist Meeting-house on the evening of the 25th, the storm preventing the services contemplated on Christmas Eve. The house was tastefully ornamented and trimmed with evergreens.

HEAVY BILLS. The U. S. Treasury has heavy bills to pay—Dec. 15th about 11 millions of interest fell due (second series of 7-30 notes;) one month hence 8 1-2 millions will be paid on the old series; and Jan. 1st 10 millions of gold interest has to be met for long bonds, making an aggregate of 40 millions of disbursements for principal interest of the public debt, in this brief period, beside the other calls upon the treasury for current expenses, claims, &c.

BLUEHILL ACADEMY.—We are informed that the Fall term of this school, which closed last week, was a very successful one. Mr. Merrill, the Preceptor, proved himself an accomplished and successful teacher, giving to the school a character for thoroughness, good order, proficiency and good deportment which is highly creditable to teacher and pupils. It is to be hoped that the Trustees will feel it their duty to retain the services of Mr. Merrill as long as possible.

——Launched at Sullivan, Dec. 25th from the yard of Doyle and White, a schooner called the Alice Gray, 243 tons burthen, to be commanded by Capt. Amaziah Gray of Bucksport.

The schooner is a first class vessel, built of the best materials, and by the best workmen.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS,

WHOSE TIMELY USE UNDER PROVIDENCE HAS OFTEN SAVED LIFE.

These celebrated Vegetable Pills are no new untried remedy; they have been tried and tested in the united States for thirty years, and are relied upon by hundreds of thousands of families as almost their sole medicine when sick. No care or expense is spared in their preparation, and it is certainly true when I assert that no King can have a medicine safer or surer than Brandreth's Pills.

They produce a good effect upon disease almost immediately after they are taken. By some wonderful power, perhaps electric or nervous influence, the progress of diseased action is arrested; where watchfulness and pain have been present, the system becomes quieter, and the patient soon obtains refreshing sleep.

The genuine BRANDRETH HILL BOX has upon it a UNITED STATES GOVERMENT STAMP with B. BRANDRETH in white letters in the same. 49

New York Tribune.

Our most momentous, arduous struggle having resulted in the triumph of American Nationality, the utter discomfiture and overthrow of Secession and Slavery, THE TRIBUNE, profoundly rejoicing in this result, will labor to conserve the legitimate fruits of this grand, benignant victory rendering Liberty and Opportunity the common heritage of the whole American People now and evermore.

Discountenancing all unmanly exultation over, or needless infliction of pain or privation on the upholders of the lost cause, it will insist on the earliest possible restoration of the Southern States to their former power and influence in our Union on the basis of All Rights for All their People.

It will labor in hope to prove that the substitution of Free for Slave Labor must inevitably and universally conduce to the increase of Industry, Thrift, Prosperity and Wealth, so that the South, within the next ten years, must look back amazed on her long persistence in a practice so baleful as the Chattelizing of Man.

It will labor for the diffusion of Common School Education, Manufactures, the Useful Arts, &c., &c., throughout every portion of our country, but especially throughout the sections hitherto devoid of them, believing that every good end will thereby be subserved and the interest of every useful and worthy class promoted.

It will urge the Protection of Home Industry by discriminating duties on Foreign Products imported, with a view to drawing hither the most capable and skillful artificers and artisans of Europe, and the naturalizing on our soil of many branches of production hitherto all but confined to the Old World, while it would strengthen and extend those which have already a foothold among us.

It will give careful attention to progress and improvement in Agriculture, doing its best at once to bring markets to the door of our farmers and teach them how to make the most of the opportunities thus afforded them.

It will devote constant attention to Markets, especially for Agricultural Products, with intent to save both producer and consumer from being victimized by the speculator and forestaller.

And, giving fair scope to Current Literature, to the proceedings of Congress, and to the general news of the Day, it hopes to retain its old patrons and attract many new to bear them company.

We rarely employ traveling agents, as so many impostors are habitually prowling in the assumed capacity of solicitors for journals. We prefer that our subscribers shall pay their money to persons they know and of whose integrity they are assured. Any friend who believes he will do good by increasing the circulation of THE TRIBUNE is authorized to solicit and receive subscriptions. Specimen copies will be promptly sent without charge to those requiring them, and we trust many friends will be moved to ask their neighbors and acquaintances to join in making up their clubs.

THE NEW-YORK SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE is published every TUESDAY and FRIDAY, and contains all the editorial articles, not merely local in character; Literary Reviews and Art Criticisms; Letters from our large corps of Foreign and domestic correspondents; Special and Associated Press Telegraphic Dispatches; a careful and complete summary of Foreign and Domestic News; Exclusive Reports of the Proceedings of the Farmer's Club of the American Institute; Talks about Fruit, and other Horticultural and Agricultural Information; Stock Financial, Cattle, Dry Goods and General Market Reports, which are published in THE DAILY TRIBUNE. THE SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE also gives, in the course of a year, THREE or FOUR of the by living authors. The cost of these alone, if bought in book form, would be from six to eight dollars. If purchased in ENGLISH MAGAZINES from which they are carefully selected, the cost would be three or four times that sum. Nowhere else can so much current intelligence and permanent literary matter be had at so cheap a rate as in THE SEMI-WEEKLY TRIBUNE. Those who believe in the principles and approve of the character of THE TRIBUNE can increase its power and influence by joining with their neighbors in forming clubs to subscribe for THE SEMI-WEEKLY Edition. It will in that way be supplied to them at the lowest price for which such a paper can be printed.

BLACKSMITH NOTICE.

THE subscriber having secured the services of Mr. JOS. H. COLE, as horse shoer, would announce to the public that he is now prepared to do that kind of work in a neat and workmanlike manner.

Those that have had horses shod by M. Cole for the past ten years, know that he has been very successful in keeping the feet in good shape, and also in so fitting the shoes as to make the horse travel easy.

Horses that interfere, he will, if a fair trial is given, cure; and also those that are tender footed will be relieved after a few times shoeing.

I shall also be prepared to iron sleighs and sleds.

Those in want of Net Anchors, next Spring, will find it to their advantage to call on me and get them made this winter. I shall use the best of iron, and know that I can make anchors that will keep the nets from dragging.

Please call at my shop on Water Street, near

J. M. GRANT'S SHIP-YARD,

for proof of the truth of this statement.

WAR CLAIMS,

Pensions, Bounties, Back Pay & Prize Money

Obtained by

FREDERICK HALE.

Another Bounty Will be Paid!

A BILL has been introduced in the House of Representatives which provides for giving to all soldiers who enlisted prior to June 25th, 1863.

The House of Representatives has already passed a resolve in favor of this bill.

The bounties will be equalized.

The undersigned announces that he shall prosecute these claims for Extra County and Bounty Land.

Advice free.

FREDERICK HALE,

Special Notice TO ALL SOLDIERS, AND HEIRS OF SOLDIERS.

CONGRESS has NOT yet enacted any law, giving EXTRA BOUNTY to Soldiers of 1861 & 1862.

Therefore,

Beware of Bogus Circulars.

Congress will doubtlessly enact some laws during the present session granting additional Bounty to Soldiers of 1861 & 1862, who were discharged in consequence of physical disability.

Whenever such law, or any law for the benefit of Soldiers or the Heirs of Soldiers is enacted, I shall be prepared to prosecute such claims with dispatch; and I shall also advance money on valid claims when desired.

All information relative to such claims cheerfully given gratis, whether the application be in person or by letter. Also all claims for Pensions, Bounties, and Prize Money entrusted to me will be promptly attended to.

No charge in any case unless successful.

State of Maine.

Hancock, ss.—To the several Sheriffs of our Counties of Hancock, Penobscot, York, Cumberland, Lincoln, Kennebec, Oxford, Somerset, Washington, Waldo, Piscataquis, Franklin, Aroostook, Androscoggin, Sagadahoc and Knox, or either of their Deputies, GREETING:

U. S. stamp. 50 P. T. Oct. 9, 1865.

We command you to attach the goods or Estate of Thomas L. White, and William Pulsifer, the former of Boston in the County of Suffolk, and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and the latter of Cambridgeport in said Commonwealth, and Eugene Hale, Esq., of Ellsworth in the County of Hancock and State of Maine, to the value of one hundred and fifty dollars, and summon the said defendants if they may be found in your precinct, to appear before our Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court next to be holden in Ellsworth, within and for the County of Hancock, on the fourth Tuesday of October instant, then and there in our said Court to answer unto Anthony Andrews of Bucksport in the County of Hancock, Trader, in a plea of debt, for that the said Thomas L. White, William Pulsifer and Eugene Hale on the eighth day of July, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty at Ellsworth aforesaid, by their note or memorandum in writing obligatory of that date, by them subscribed, sealed with their seals and here in Court to be produced, bound and acknowledged themselves to be jointly and severally holden, bound and indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of one hundred and twenty dollars to be paid to the Plaintiff on demand.

Yet though often requested the said Defendants have not paid said sum but neglect so to do, to the damage of Plaintiff (as he says) the sum of one hundred and fifty dollars, which shall then and there be made to appear with other due damages. And have you there this Writ with your doings therein.

Witness, John Appleton, Esquire, at Ellsworth this ninth day of October in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five.

P. W. PERRY, Clerk.

STATE OF MAINE.

Hancock, ss.—Supreme Judicial Court, October Term, 1865.

And now it appearing to the Court, that, the said defendants, Thomas L. White and William Pulsifer, at the date of the service of the writ, were not inhabitants of this State, and had no tenant, agent, or attorney within the same, and that they have had no notice of the pendency of this suit, it is ordered that, notice of the pendency of this suit be given to the said White and Pulsifer, by publishing an attested copy of the writ and this order thereon, three weeks successively in the Ellsworth American, the last publication to be at least thirty days before the next term of this Court to be held at Ellsworth within and for the County of Hancock on the fourth Tuesday of April next, that they may then and there, in said Court appear and show cause if any they have, why judgment should not be rendered against them and execution issue accordingly.

Attest, P. W. PERRY, Clerk.

A true copy of the writ and order of Court thereon.

Probate Notices.

To the Honorable Parker Tuck, Judge of Probate for the County of Hancock:

NEHEMIAH HINCKLEY, and Benjamin Snow, Administrators of the estate of John Snow late of Bluehill, in said County deceased, respectfully represent: that the personal estate of said deceased is insufficient to pay the just debts which he owed at the time of his death, by the sum of two thousand and fifty dollars. Your petitioners therefore pray that your Honor would grant them license to sell and convey so much of the real estate of said deceased as may be necessary for the payment of said debts, with incidental charges.

NEHEMIAH HINCKLEY, } Administrators.
BENJAMIN SWAN,

Dated the 6th of Dec., 1865.

At a Court of Probate holden at Ellsworth, within and for the County of Hancock, on the first Wednesday of Dec., A. D. 1865.

On the foregoing petition, Ordered—That the petitioner give notice to all persons interested, by causing a copy of the petition and order of Court thereon to be published three weeks successively in the Ellsworth American, a newspaper printed at Ellsworth, that they may appear at a Probate Court, to be holden at Bucksport, in said County, on the third Wednesday of January next, at ten of the clock in the forenoon, and shew cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petition should not be granted.

Pork Hams.

"I have no smoke house," exclaimed Mr. Smith, "how shall I smoke my hams?

His neighbor Jones answered him, "O, that's easy enough. I put some strings through the head of a barrel, and tie them fast to three or four hams, then dig a lit, tle hole in the ground, in which I make a smudge of sawdust, over which I set the barrel, and keep the fire going pretty snug and they smoke enough in three or four days."

The above is an overheard railroad conversation. With due deference to Mr. Jones, we reply publicly to his private remark, that he knows no more about making good hams than the pig that produced them. I would as soon sit dawn to a piece of smoked sole-leather as his barrel cured hams.

In the first place, hams should be placed so far from the fire that the smoke will be absolutely cool before it reaches them. Then they should be hung in a room open to the atmosphere, not tight like a barrel, and should not be smoked rapidly as they would be in a barrel, until nearly black on the outside. A moderate smoke made twice as many days as a ham weighs pounds, will make good sweet smoked meat. Never commence smoking until your hams have hung long enough after taking out of the pickle to be thoroughly dried. The English dry their hams and use them without smoking. They are far preferable that way to hams smoked as those recommended above, in a barrel or any similar contrivance.

Many persons have spare rooms about their buildings, sometimes in the garret of a dwelling, in which hams can be smoked, by making a fire out-doors, or ina stove, and conducting the smoke through a long pipe. We have seen a very nice smoke-house where the fire was built fifty or sixty feet from the building, in a little oven dug in the ground, the smoke being conducted through a covered trench up a hill-side to the base of the building, and then through a wooden pipe to the garret, where the meat was hung upon the rafters. During the smoking operation a window was kept open in each end of the room.

Remember, as a rule, the slower you smoke the meat the better. The best wood is green hickory, then maple, beech, ash, apple tree.—Never use locust; the bark imparts an unpleasant flavor to the meat. Several other kinds of wood do the same. Corn-cobs make very sweet bacon. Never use any wood that makes a black smoke. Never use rotten wood, nor sawdust. The last day of smoking it is a good plan to burn a few red pepper pods.

As to curing hams, doctors disagree. I believe I have as good hams as ever were eaten, by using six lbs. salt and four ozs. saltpeter to 100 lbs. pork, putting the salt dry upon the meat as soon as possible after it was dressed.—We have also made excellent hams in a pickle made as follows:

Weigh the hams or shoulders and take 8 per cent. of the weight—that is, 8 lbs. per cwt.—of rock salt, and put it in a kettle of water and heat it, and skim off all the scum that will rise. Then add 1 quart of molasses, 2 lbs. of white sugar, 1-4 lb. saleratus, 1-2 lb. saltpeter, 1 or 2 ozs. allspice for 100 pounds of meat. Boil all together and skim again, and let it cool, and pour it over the meat, adding water enough to cover it

To those who prefer sugar-cured hams we offer the following recipe:

To cure a ham of fifteen pounds weight requires one pound of good brown sugar, two ounces refined and ground saltpeter, half a pound of ground sea-salt First application—saltpeter, and cover the face of the ham with sugar a quarter of an inch thick; on the fifth day rub the skin side with sugar. Second application—saltpeter and a mixture of three parts sugar and one part salt; on the seventh day rub as before. Third application—half sugar and half salt; in seven days rub as before. Fourth application—same as last; in seven days rub with half sugar and salt; clean the flesh side of the ham. Fifth application—very good molasses (not sorghum) as long as the meat will absorb it. Saturate the ham with sugar as you would in preserving fruit; the salt is only to flavor it; for hams intended for boiling, and which requires more salt, you may use salt according to your judgment and gain more time. The ham is now cured, and for purposes of boiling it will be found delicious.

One word more about the special advantage of curing with sugar; fat cured with salt is repulsive to weak stomachs; consequently a large portion is trimmed off hams intended for the American market that in England is always retained, for two reasons—economy and preserving the juices. Stomachs that reject fat when salted, find it palatable when cured with sugar.—Solon Robinson.

RULES FOR THE JOURNEY OF LIFE.—Never ridicule sacred things, or what others may esteem as such, however absurd they may appear to you. Never show levity when people are engaged in religious worship. Never resent a supposed injury till you know the views and motives of the author. Always take the part of an absent person, who is censured in company, so far as truth and propriety will admit. Never affect to be witty, nor jest to wound the feelings of another. Say as little as possible about yourself and those who are near you. Aim at cheerfulness without levity. Never obtrude advice unasked. Never court the favor of the rich by flattering their vices or vanities. On all occasions have in prospect the end of life and future good.

Ellsworth, Dec. 6th, 1865. 49

To the Honorable Parker Tuck, Judge of Probate, within and for the County of Hancock.

HUMBLY SHOWS Sarah Jarvis, Guardian of Andrew S. Jarvis, minor and one of the heirs of Charles Jarvis, late of Ellsworth in said County deceased—To wit: The lands and real estate of said Charles Jarvis in the towns of Eddington and Clifton in said State of Maine, as specified in the Inventory and appraisal of the real estate of said Charles Jarvis now on file at this Probate Office, and that said minor's interest in the same is one undivided eighth part, and that the remaining co-heirs have sold advantageously their shares in said lands, and that the sale of said minor's half is necessary in order to complete conveyances satisfactory to the purchasers thereof, and that your petitioner is offered for said minor's share a larger sum than his share would amount to according to said inventory and appraisal; and that it would be for the benefit of the said minor that his said intrest in said deceased's estate as above described should be disposed of at private sale in accordance with said offer, and the proceeds thereof put out, and secured to him on interest.—Your petitioner therefore prays that your Honor would grant her license to dispose of the same at public or private sale accordingly, agreeably to a law of this state, in such cases made and provided.

SARAH JARVIS.

The Greatest Discovery
OF THE AGE IS THE Mystic Burning Oil!

THE attention of the public is invited to the above named Oil, which is pronounced by all who have used it

The Best Oil in the Market.

The following are some of its principal qualities:

It emits no offensive odor while burning.
It does not readily smoke.
It burns with great brilliancy and steadiness.
It cannot be exploded; and in softness of light is equal to Alcohol We claim that it possesses all the superior qualities of Fluid, with none of its defects.
It burns beautifully in the common Fluid lamp and far better than Kerosene in the common Kerosene lamp with the simple adoption of Marcy' Patent, Union Hinge Burner, which is the only perfectly safe Burner now in use.
It is a cheap and admirable substitute for Fluid Kerosene, Camphene and Alcohol; and its perfect safety willcommend it to an intelligent public.

☞We respectfully solicit your orders, with a satisfactor rassurance that the Oil, if thoroughly tested, willfar exceed your expectations.

Bininger's Bourbon Whiskey.

The established popularity of this Choice Old Bourbon as a medical agent, renders it superfluous to mention in detail the characteristics which distinguish it from the ordinary grade of Kentucky Whiskeys. being distilled in 1849, and manufactured expressly for us with great care, it can be relied upon as a strictly pure stimulant, and peculiarly effective for the treatment of Lung Complaints, Dyspepsia, Derangement of the Stomach, etc.

Bininger's Genuine Cognac Brandy.

It is mild, delicate and fruity, and is designed to be always uniform in character and quality. Put in pint and quart bottles, in cases containing two dozen pints and one dozen quarts.

Bininger's Old London Dock Gin.

Especially designed for the use of the Medical Profession and the Family, and has all of those intrinsic medical qualities (tonic and diuretic) which belong to an old and pure Gin. It has received the personal endorsement of over seven thousand Physicians, who have recommended it in the treatment of Gravel, Dropsy, Rheumatism, Obstruction or Suppression of the Menses, Affections of the Kidneys, etc. Put up in pint or quart bottles.

Bininger's Wheat Tonic.

This natural product of the most nutritious grain recommends itself as presenting in a concentrated form the nutritive properties of Wheat, and has received the highest encomiums from eminent medical authorities, a possessing qualities actually FATTENING;—this desiderata tum renders it invaluable to those who are suffering from Consumption, Lung Complaint, Bronchitis, Impaired Strength, Lack of Vital Energy, and all diseases, which in their incipient stages, require only a generous diet, and an invigorating, nourishing stimulant. This wonderful invention has become an indispensable comfort to housekeepers. Clothes which have the water pressed out by this machine wear nearly twice as long as when twisted and strained by the usual hand wringing. In an ordinary New England family it will pay for itself in four or six months, by the saving in the wear and tear of clothes in washing. It will wring anything, from a lace collar to the largest bed quilt.

The following are the sizes, and prices, usually sold:

No. 3 Wringer,	without cog wheels,	$6,50
2½ "	" " "	7,50
2 "	with cog wheels,	8,50

The No. 2 is recommended as preferable to all others, as by the use of the cog wheels all straining or tearing of the clothes is effectually prevented, besides the wringer itself will wear much longer.

I have a good stock of the above machines just received from the manufactory, for sale, or to furnish to families For Trial, free of expense.

All orders from out of town promptly attended to. CHA'S J. ULMER.

American and Foreign Patents,

R. H. EDDY,
SOLICITOR OF PATENTS.
Late Agent U.S. Patent Office, Washington, (under the Act of 1837.)
76 State Street, opposite Kilby Street,
BOSTON

AFTER an extensive practice of upwards of twenty years, continues to secure Patents in the United States, also in Great Britain, France and other Foreign countries. Caveats, Specifications, Bonds, Assignments, and all Papers or Drawings for Patents, executed on liberal terms, and with dispatch. Researches made into American or Foreign works, to determine the validity or utility of Patents or Inventions—and legal or other advice rendered in all matters touching the same. Copies of the claims of any patent furnished by remitting One Dollar. Assignments recorded at Washington.

The Agency is not only the largest in New England, but through it inventors have advantages for securing Patents, of ascertaining the patentability of inventions, unsurpassed by, if not immeasurably superior to, any which can be offered them elsewhere. The Testimonials below given prove that none is MORE SUCCESSFUL AT THE PATENT OFFICE than the subscriber; and as SUCCESS IS THE BEST PROOF OF ADVANTAGES AND ABILITY, he would add that he has abundant reason to believe, and can prove, that at no other office of the kind are the charges for professional services so moderate.—The immense practice of the subscriber during twenty years past, has enabled him to accumulate a vast collection of specifications and official decisions relative to patents.

These, besides his extensive library of legal and mechanical works, and full accounts of patents granted in the United States and Europe, render him able, beyond question, to offer superior facilities for obtaining Patents.

All necessity of a journey to Washington, to procure a patent, and the usual great delay there, are here saved inventors.

TESTIMONIALS:

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse." CHARLES MASON,
Commissioner of Patents.

"I have no hesitation in assuring inventors that they cannot employ a person more competent and trustworthy and more capable of putting their applications in a form to secure for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office.

EDMUND BURKE,
Late Commissioner of Patents.

"Mr. R. H Eddy has made for me THIRTEEN applications, on all but one of which patents have been granted, and that is now pending. Such unmistakable proof of great talent and ability on his part leads me to recommend all inventors to apply to him to procure their patents, as they may be sure of having, the most faithful attention bestowed on their cases, and at very reasonable charges." JOHN TAGGART.

During eight months, the subscriber, in course of his large practice, made on twice rejected applications, SIXTEEN APPEALS, EVERY ONE of which was decided in his favor, by the Commissioner of Patents.
